

The Democratic Declaration

His Majesty King Charles III
Buckingham Palace
London SW1A 1AA
United Kingdom

Your Majesty,

I write this letter on behalf of concerned citizens of the United Kingdom, who wish to respectfully request Your Majesty's consideration of the current state of the nation's government. We feel it is our duty to bring to Your Majesty's attention critical concerns regarding the Labour government's policies and the broader implications for our nation's well-being.

Legitimacy Concerns: Representation and Ideological Alignment

It is crucial to highlight that the current Labour government was elected by only approximately 20% of the nation's eligible voters. This figure suggests that Labour was able to form a government not with the backing of the majority, but effectively by appealing to a narrow segment of the population. In essence, the Labour Party seems to have voted itself into power, without securing the broad mandate necessary to govern a country as diverse as the United Kingdom. We believe this raises serious concerns about the legitimacy of the government's mandate, particularly when it comes to the implementation of policies that will affect the entire nation.

Moreover, we draw attention to the fact that almost 90% of Labour government members are also members of the Fabian Society, an organization whose long-standing goals include the gradual implementation of socialist policies. This alignment raises serious concerns about conflict of interest within the government. When a significant proportion of government members are affiliated with an organization that espouses a particular ideological agenda, it calls into question whether the government is acting in the interest of the entire country or merely advancing its own ideological objectives. In a democratic system, such ideological capture should not be allowed, as it undermines the principle of governance for all citizens, not just a select few.

Grave Consequences of Labour's Devolution Program

For an extended period, long-term residents of the United Kingdom have been diligently gathering evidence of the devastating consequences of the devolution program aggressively pursued by the Labour government. This program, while presented as a means of decentralizing power, appears to many to mirror key elements of the Communist Manifesto, particularly in its redistribution of authority from national governance to local authorities. This is happening regardless of whether these local bodies have the capabilities or the public's trust to make decisions that align with the national interest.

Under the banner of climate emergency, we are witnessing an ironic and tragic reality: animals are being abused, culled, and mass slaughtered, while nature itself is being systematically destroyed. Solar panels, once hailed as a solution, are now being categorized as outdated technology. Meanwhile, wind turbines, another so-called eco-friendly innovation, are killing birds and disrupting entire ecosystems. The very phrase "climate emergency" or "save the planet" seems to have taken on a perverse meaning—to save the planet as a globe by sacrificing all life on it.

Furthermore, under the so-called housing emergency, many local authorities, when asked to provide government-required evidence to justify such a crisis, have been unable to do so. Yet, despite this lack of justification, wildlife, natural habitats, and our treasured British heritage continue to be destroyed in the name of development. All of this is happening with little regard for the voices of concerned citizens who object to these reckless actions.

It seems that in both cases—climate and housing—the solutions being pursued are causing more harm than good, prioritizing destruction over preservation and silencing those who stand for the protection of life and the environment.

Financial Mismanagement and Global Influence

Adding to this is the concern that trillions of pounds are being funnelled into initiatives that do not prioritize the welfare of the British people. Instead of focusing on national economic stability, the protection of public services, or the well-being of its citizens, the government appears to be spending vast sums on issues largely driven by global NGOs. These non-governmental organizations heavily influence local authorities and, by extension, dictate national policy in ways that seem disconnected from the true needs of the British people.

We believe this is a severe mismanagement of the national budget, leading to the neglect of essential services and infrastructure. Even more alarming is the fact that only 10% of local councils have provided a proper audit covering their financial activities over the past five years. The remaining councils have amassed billions in debt while refusing to disclose their spending details. Instead of taking accountability, they deflect blame onto previous governments, citing bad administration as their excuse.

This lack of transparency and accountability only deepens the growing sense of unease among the population, who witness their natural surroundings, history, and cultural heritage being dismantled in the name of ideological conformity, all while financial mismanagement and public neglect go unchecked

Historical Precedent of Monarchical Intervention

We are aware that direct intervention from the Crown is rare, but there is a historical precedent for such action within the Commonwealth. In 1975, during the Australian constitutional crisis, Queen Elizabeth II's representative, Governor-General Sir John Kerr, dissolved the Australian government when it failed to maintain parliamentary support. While the political circumstances were different, this action highlights the importance of the Crown in upholding democratic principles and ensuring that governance reflects the will and welfare of the people.

Legal and Constitutional Grounds

We also respectfully cite Section 3 of the Representation of the People Act 1983, which underscores that government is by consent of the governed. When a government ceases to represent the majority of its citizens and instead follows policies driven by external influences, it risks alienating the very people it is supposed to serve. Furthermore, under the Royal Prerogative, Your Majesty possesses the discretionary authority to dissolve Parliament. While this is typically exercised on the advice of the Prime Minister, we believe the exceptional circumstances we are witnessing today warrant consideration for Your Majesty's involvement.

Our Request

We, the undersigned citizens, respectfully request that Your Majesty uses Your constitutional authority to dissolve the current government and call for fresh elections. We are also requesting that these elections be conducted under revised electoral regulations to ensure that the process is fair, truly democratic, and accurately reflects the opinions and preferences of real, living British citizens. It is our belief that only through such measures can the integrity of our democracy be restored and the voice of the people genuinely heard. The actions of the Labour government, especially in their pursuit of the devolution program and financial mismanagement, are leading to the destruction of the very fabric of this nation—its heritage, natural beauty, and the well-being of its citizens. These decisions appear to be driven not by the interests of the British people but by ideologues and global influences that do not align with the needs of our country.

We also wish to raise concern about the Prorogation and Calling of Parliament Act 2022, which was passed without the public referendum that such a significant constitutional change would merit. This act, which effectively alters how Parliament is dissolved, and elections are called, should have involved the direct input of the British people through a referendum, as it affects the democratic structure of the country.

This request is made with the utmost respect for the democratic principles that underpin our nation. We believe that fresh elections would provide a true reflection of the public's will and restore faith in our democratic system.

Our Request

We, the undersigned citizens, respectfully request that Your Majesty uses Your constitutional authority to dissolve the current government and call for fresh elections. We are also requesting that these elections be conducted under revised electoral regulations to ensure that the process is fair, truly democratic, and accurately reflects the opinions and preferences of real, living British citizens. Given the significant constitutional changes introduced without public consent, we call for a referendum on the Prorogation and Calling of Parliament Act 2022. It is our belief that only through such measures can the integrity of our democracy be restored and the voice of the people genuinely heard.

In making this declaration, we stand firmly within our legal rights as British citizens to petition the Crown. The following laws and regulations support our right to make this declaration:

1. The Bill of Rights 1689: This fundamental document guarantees the right of citizens to petition the monarch. As British citizens, we are exercising this constitutional right in calling upon Your Majesty to address the concerns outlined in this declaration. The Bill of Rights affirms that subjects “may freely petition the king,” establishing our legal grounds for raising grievances directly to the Crown.
2. The Human Rights Act 1998: This act incorporates the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR) into UK law. Article 10 of the ECHR guarantees the right to freedom of expression, which includes the right to voice political concerns and participate in democratic processes. Article 11 further protects the right to peaceful assembly and association, which extends to collective action in matters of public interest, such as this declaration.

3. The Representation of the People Act 1983 (Section 3): This act underscores that government is by the consent of the governed. It is our right to hold the government accountable when it no longer represents the majority or prioritizes external agendas over the welfare of British citizens. This law supports our call for fresh elections under revised regulations to ensure genuine democratic representation.
4. The Magna Carta 1215 (Clause 61): Historically, this clause provided the right for subjects to seek redress when the sovereign or government failed in its duty to the people. Although specific clauses of the Magna Carta have been superseded by modern law, it remains a symbolic cornerstone of British constitutional tradition, reinforcing the principle that citizens have the right to seek redress when the government no longer upholds its responsibilities.
5. The Public Interest Disclosure Act 1998: While typically applied to whistleblowing in organizations, this act upholds the importance of transparency and accountability in public bodies. It supports the principle that citizens have the right to raise concerns regarding government actions and financial mismanagement, as we do in this declaration.

In addition to these rights, we propose the following key regulations and legal reforms to ensure the integrity of democratic processes moving forward:

1. Mandatory Electoral Audits: All local councils must undergo mandatory audits of their electoral processes and finances, covering the past five years, with full disclosure to the public. These audits must verify that council activities, including expenditures and decision-making processes, are transparent and in the public interest.
2. Revised Electoral Laws: We call for revisions to the Representation of the People Act to ensure that only verifiable, living British citizens are registered to vote. The introduction of mandatory identification at polling stations is essential to prevent electoral fraud and to ensure that only eligible voters participate in elections.
3. Financial Transparency and Accountability Laws: Local councils and public institutions must be legally required to disclose their financial activities and expenditures, including any affiliations with external organizations such as global NGOs. This should be part of an annual audit that is accessible to the public to foster transparency and accountability.
4. Reform of Devolution Powers: We propose a comprehensive review of the current devolution program, ensuring that local authorities only hold powers that they are capable of responsibly managing. Centralized oversight must be reintroduced to prevent misuse of power at the local level, particularly in decisions that affect national interests, such as housing development and environmental policies.

5. Reassessment of Climate and Housing Emergency Policies: We recommend a full parliamentary review of the environmental and housing policies implemented under the "climate emergency" and "housing emergency" banners. This review must involve public consultations and independent scientific assessments to ensure these policies are truly beneficial for the environment, wildlife, and citizens, rather than driven by ideological or external agendas.
6. Repeal or Reform of the Prorogation and Calling of Parliament Act 2022: Given the significant constitutional changes introduced without public consent, we call for a referendum on this act. The British public should have the final say on any changes to the democratic process of dissolving Parliament and calling elections.
7. Regulation of Global NGO Influence: We propose stricter regulations on the influence of global non-governmental organizations in local and national governance. Any financial or advisory role these organizations play within government decisions should be clearly outlined and publicly disclosed to avoid conflicts of interest that may not align with the needs of British citizens.

These regulatory and legal reforms are essential to restore the confidence of the British people in their democratic system and ensure that future elections reflect the genuine will of the public. The actions of the Labour government, especially in their pursuit of the devolution program and financial mismanagement, are leading to the destruction of the very fabric of this nation—its heritage, natural beauty, and the well-being of its citizens. These decisions appear to be driven not by the interests of the British people but by ideologues and global influences that do not align with the needs of our country.

We also wish to raise concern about the Prorogation and Calling of Parliament Act 2022, which was passed without the public referendum that such a significant constitutional change would merit. This act, which effectively alters how Parliament is dissolved, and elections are called, should have involved the direct input of the British people through a referendum, as it affects the democratic structure of the country.

This request is made with the utmost respect for the democratic principles that underpin our nation. We believe that fresh elections would provide a true reflection of the public's will and restore faith in our democratic system.

We thank Your Majesty for your time and attention to this urgent matter, and we trust that Your Majesty will act in the best interests of the British people and the integrity of the United Kingdom.

With the deepest respect,

The General Secretary of the Heritage Party
On behalf of political parties, groups, societies, assemblies, movements, and concerned citizens of the United Kingdom
